School Outcomes of Children With Special Health Care Needs

WHAT'S KNOWN ON THIS SUBJECT: Using a noncategorical approach to identifying children with special health care needs, previous research has shown that these individuals are at increased risk for poor health and high health care resource use.

WHAT THIS STUDY ADDS: Children who screen positive for a special health care need because of functional limitations or behavioral health problems are at risk for low student engagement, disruptive behaviors, poor grades, and below-average performance on standardized achievement tests.
